The Geography of Light² - Robert J. Brodey

Exhibition of Photographic works

BIO

Robert Brodey is a Toronto-based writer and photographer, whose longing for new places has sent him travelling around the world, writing and shooting for the likes of Street Kids International, Outpost Magazine, The Toronto Star, and The Houston Chronicle.

In 2015, he self-published his first novel, an international political thriller, Josef's Lair, which is available digitally and in paperback on Amazon. www.JosefsLair.com

STATEMENT

I have always been attracted to movement and change. I love the element of surprise, the contrasts, and the rush that comes when all the senses light up.

For me, what is distant holds a degree of mystery and stokes the fire of imagination and curiosity. I want to go there, says the little voice in my head. I need to experience it. In that way, travelling is a conscious seeking -- for different cultures, different landscapes, and, yes, sometimes even different light.

This exhibit is dedicated to my father, Peter Brodey, a lifelong traveller, who inspired me on so many family trips -- from France and Mexico to Kenya and Canada's majestic north country (among other places). His life and his recent passing have left an indelible mark on me.
